PhD, Political and Social Sciences

- Thesis: From the Quantity of Employment to the Quality of Employment: An Application of the Capability Approach to the Chilean Labour Market, Faculty of Social and Political Sciences, University of Cambridge
- Fieldwork Research undertaken in 1999: survey of all employed and unemployed members of 1000 households in Gran Santiago. The survey registered information on their past and present employment situations, working conditions, benefits associated with their employment, social security provisions and personal data on the interviewees and their households. The aim of the survey was to investigate issues not addressed by existing labour market surveys in Chile and to thus provide information that could lead to a more comprehensive analysis of the Chilean labour market.
- Research Topics of the thesis: Amartya Sen's Capability Approach applied to the Chilean labour market, labour legislation and labour market analysis in Chile, analysis of existing surveys and other sources of information, the characteristics of employment in Chile, employment histories of the work force, the impact of the 1998/9 economic crisis on the Chilean labour market, the relationship between theoretical legislation and the reality of the labour market, characteristics of the unemployed in Chile, analysis of the Chilean unemployment insurance scheme implemented in 2002 that relies on individual savings accounts, and a proposal of an indicator to measure the quality of employment with an analysis of the labour market using this indicator.
